

Software Logistics exhibits at The London Book Fair 2008

Stand T805, 14-16 April. London Earls Court

Following the success of last year show, Software Logistics Ltd will exhibit again this year at the London Book Fair.

Software Logistics is a supplier of digital product services, CD/DVD replication and associated printed materials to European publishers. A full range of digital reproduction and packaging capabilities will be on display including the latest duplication equipment that provides response times as short as four hours.

Software Logistics is now one of the market leaders in the publishing sector able to provide cost-effective production and packaging options to publishers for all their digital product requirements.

Barry Hurley, Managing Director of Software Logistics said, "We have made great strides in terms of our profile in this market sector over the last twelve months and are now established as a key supplier to several high profile publishing organisations, we look forward to continuing to support the industry through the delivery of innovative packaging concepts and fantastic service. This will be underlined by our continued ability to deliver a full service model that encompasses design, media production, print management and logistics".

About Software Logistics

Founded in 1993 Software Logistics provides single source design, print and distribution services to clients with a requirement to package and distribute digital and printed material to a wide audience. Projects range from simple print and media production to complex multi-part packages across clients that include multi-national companies, publishers and Central Government departments.

For more information visit www.softwarelogistics.com

Or contact:

Barry Hurley

Managing Director

Software Logistics

T: 01494 455544

E: bhurley@softwarelogistics.com